

Recognize Your Students' Exceptional Coursework

Do you have a student who has submitted exceptional coursework? The Franklin University Library recognizes exceptional student coursework in the Distinguished Student Scholarship Collection (DSSC). These works will be available in Franklin University's digital institutional repository, FUSE.

Faculty can nominate works from undergraduate, graduate, and doctoral students (doctoral student work must be non-dissertation related) enrolled during the term. To avoid issues with future assignments, only completed works that do not reflect an assigned topic and will not be repeated in future course instances should be submitted. All submissions must be in PDF or Word format.

Examples of acceptable works include:

- Research papers
- Projects
- Posters

NOTE: Papers, projects, or posters must be original work done within the scope of a student's coursework. Students should select their topic for the work rather than responding to an assigned topic.

If a student in one of your courses submits work that meets these criteria during summer term, submit it for inclusion in the DSSC. Nominations will be accepted throughout the term, and will be reviewed with works accepted to the DSSC available in FUSE the following term. Students with works in the DSSC will also receive a Credly badge from the University recognizing their scholarship which they can share to let peers or potential employers know of their achievement.
